A "new" place of relaxation is now available at the Milton Mall.

Thai Oasis, which offers a wide range of massage therapy services, relocated from its previous Main Street location.

The business, first opened around 2017, and needed to expand to accommodate its growing clients. Dennis Feng, one of the partners and a registered acupuncturist, told Inside Halton, explaining the reason for the move.

The new place is nearly 2,000 square feet.

"It's much bigger," Feng said.

Feng, who is also a registered traditional Chinese medicine practitioner, said that unlike Swedish massage, therapists use stretching techniques in Thai massage by gently pushing or pulling the arms and legs of the fully dressed clients — sometimes the head — to promote flexibility, improve circulation and relax the body.

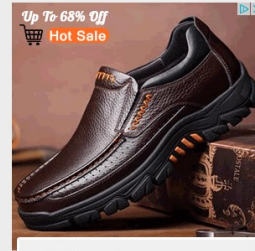

The Milton resident said it's often described as "passive yoga."

The traditional Thai massage starts at $50 per 30 minutes, according to its website.

To ensure the safety of clients and therapists, masks are mandatory for both. Other COVID-19 safety protocols are also in place, including screening customers for COVID-19 symptoms upon booking and entering the unit. The business only accepts booking appointments for now.
